U.S. and Iran expect agreement before Carter leaves presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Iran, in accord on every point but still reading the fine print, reached the brink of agreement Sunday night for the release of 52 American hostages, probably before President Carter leaves office Tuesday.

The Carter administration, driving for a late-night accord, completed its own review of the agreement and awaited "final review, approval and initialing" in Tehran, an administration official said.

Translation delays
The official said there was no indication "that any major problems have arisen." He said the delay was caused by the complicated translations necessary to prepare the agreement in three different countries and three languages — English, French for the Algerian intermediaries, and Farsi, the language of Iran.

Carter's successor, Ronald Reagan, endorsed whatever deal Carter could make.

The hostages, seized 442 days ago Sunday from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, may be freed on Monday, according to a man who identified himself as one of the six Algerian doctors who will examine the captives before their departure.

Shortly before midnight, President Carter was still in the Oval Office, hoping to address the nation once the settlement was completed and announced in Algiers.

'Matter of hours'
A broadcast from Algeria said the "final adjustments to the agreement can only be a matter of hours," and Sen. Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "I'm certain a deal will be made public before we all go to bed tonight."

Louisa Kennedy, wife of hostage Moorehead Kennedy, said Carter called her and another hostage wife, Katherine Kouss, president of the Family Liaison Action Group, Sunday afternoon and explained the problem over translations. "He made us feel very good," she said.

Asked to describe Carter's mood on the telephone, Mrs. Kennedy said, "We're all practicing caution in our thoughts. There's always something that can go wrong."

Throughout the day Sunday, there were reports that an official announcement would come at any moment, probably from Algiers, where Deputy Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher was heading the U.S. negotiating team.

But as the moments passed, an official explained that minor problems over wording "may crop up and may take anywhere from five minutes to whatever" to resolve.

At the State Department, a senior official said simply: "The only problems I know at this point are impatience."

Multi-billion deal
Overall, the agreement provides for return of about $9.5 billion in blocked Iranian assets in exchange for the hostages' release. Vice President Walter Mondale said Sunday that the U.S. government would not pay "a dime of American money" to get the hostages back.

Iran's top negotiator said an accord had been struck, but not yet signed, and that the hostages would go free in the next few days.

White House chief of staff Jack Watson Jr., appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," said the hostages would be flown from Iran

Vashington welcomes Reagan

WASHINGTON — With gospel hymns and era, bluegrass and black-tie ballet, the capital whooping it up for the inauguration of Ronald Reagan — a celebration made all the sweeter by glistening prospects for the hostages' release. Reagan, who will become president at noon on Tuesday, contributed to the cautious euphoria in his way to church by remarking that if he gives up the hostages, "I'll sign anything." The president-elect and his wife, choosing regally from the dozens of inaugural events to attend, worshipped at the National Presbyterian Church, attended a luncheon and named to make an appearance at three black-Kennedy Center inaugural concerts — opera, ballet and classical music — in the evening.

General says MX top priority

OMAHA, Neb. — U.S. intercontinental missiles are becoming so vulnerable that the proposed mobile MX missile "must be absolutely the nation's highest military priority," Gen. Charles H. Ellis said in an interview shortly after announcing his retirement as commander-in-chief of the Strategic Air Command. In an interview with The Omaha World-Herald published Sunday, Ellis said "the need is there day" for the controversial missile system. The increased firepower and accuracy of Soviet missiles "have put our Minuteman at risk to the point where, if we had to ride out an attack, the need is fast approaching where we could not respond effectively in a coherent manner," Ellis said.

Israel will hold early elections

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government, battered by economic and foreign policy problems and the loss of its ruling majority, announced Sunday it will dissolve Israel's Parliament and call elections for July 7, four months ahead of schedule.

The opposition Labor Party immediately opposed elections for May 12 and accused the government of stalling.

Begin's term expires Nov. 17.

After the adoption of a dissolution bill, the government continues to function with full powers until a new government is formed, which will take several months after the election.

Atlanta soaps dirty books, films

ATLANTA — Almost all of Atlanta's adult bookstores and movie theaters have agreed to use in return for dismissal of charges against their employees, and a prosecutor hailed the bargain as proof that "law enforcement now has an upper hand" against pornography.

"If you need a dirty book, you'll have to leave Atlanta to get it," said Glenn Zell, an attorney for the stores.

Zell said owners of at least 16 adult bookstores read Friday to close their doors on condition of anti-pornography crusader Fulton County Solicitor General Hinson McAuliffe dismiss all charges pending against their employees.

Assistant Solicitor General Leonard Rhodes said that would leave one adult book store, three adult theaters and one peep show still operating in Atlanta.

Controversy smolders over female draftees

By AUDREY GASKING
Asst. News Editor

Standing alone on night guard duty aboard the U.S. Norton Sound last spring, a female sailor was approached by her male petty officer. Later she testified during the petty officer's court-martial that he used obscene language and tried to sexually assault her.

Six other female sailors also testified to having similar experiences with the same sailor. The same ship reported two stabbings during May, a female sailor lost overboard and eight charges of lesbian activities.

"It's not just a job — it's an adventure," but for many women, the life of GI Joe is an adventure they would rather do without.

With the advent of a peace time draft and the registration of all 18-year-old men, mandatory military service for women could be just around the corner.

Opponents of drafting females into the armed services say women aren't suited for the military's trench life. Proponents say "that's hogwash" and if men are going to be drafted, women should be too.

Proposal defeated
In July, 1980, Congress defeated President Jimmy Carter's proposal requiring that women register for the draft, but the debate is far from over.

The American Civil Liberties Union has petitioned the United States Supreme Court questioning the constitutionality of requiring men to register for mandatory military service while excluding women.

The ACLU is opposed to a peacetime draft involving anyone, said Shirley Pedler, director of the ACLU in Utah.

"The purpose of this suit is to have the draft abolished altogether," Ms. Pedler said. "But if there is a draft, it is in violation of the equal protection clause of the first and 14th amendments to draft men but not women."

If the Supreme Court rules that the present draft laws are unconstitutional, Congress will be forced to make a decision: either draft women or draft no one. The ACLU hopes Congress will take the latter position, but there are no guarantees.

Mandatory service
"I feel there should be military conscription, in which everyone would be required to serve in the military for a specified amount of time," said Candi Child, a senior in political science from Walnut Creek, Calif., who is enrolled in BYU's ROTC program. "It would be a lot better than sitting around waiting to get married. In the military there are many jobs available to women which can give them valuable experience and skills."

Two BYU students, Laura Headlee, a sophomore in social work from Farmington Hills, Mich., and her sister Carolyn, a senior in psychology, are members of the National Eagle Forum, a group that opposes mandatory military service for women. The Forum has prepared and sent legal briefs to the Supreme Court to counteract the testimony of the ACLU.

The Headlees will lecture on why women should not be drafted at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 27 in 321 ELWC.

The ACLU sent 16 men of draft age to testify as to why both women and men should be drafted. The Forum is sending the testimonies of 16 women, also of draftable age, to present its views on women and mandatory military service.

Laura Headlee was asked to submit a brief arguing against drafting women from a religious standpoint. She was recommended by her stake patriarch's wife to Phyllis Schlafley, founder and president of the Forum.

"My dad is very active in politics," Miss Headlee said. "I am interested in politics also, so I agreed to testify."

The request came in July, and Miss Headlee spent much of the past seven months researching the issue of women in the military.

"I've concluded that women should not be required to serve in combat duty," she said. "Women have only 60 percent of the physical strength of men, and a military that is 50 percent female would be weaker than one that was 100 percent male."

She said her testimony deals with the religious implications of the draft, such as the disregard to the divine roles designated for men and women. She also researched the question in terms of other areas.

Strong military needed
"The purpose of an army is to protect the country," Miss Headlee said. "It is not the place for social experimentation. Our military needs to be as strong as possible."

Carolyn, Laura's sister, helped research the question and expressed her views.

"The placement of women in combat duty is contrary to history," Miss Headlee said. "Though the Soviet Union and other countries have experimented with it, they have abandoned it."

"The armies of the United States' potential enemies are composed of men," she continued. "If we sent women against them we would send a weaker force."

Carolyn said she is not opposed to women serving in the military, "there are ways to serve your country other than in combat. I think women should be given the choice."

The Headlees cited other reasons why women should not be required to serve in the military.

"Women are psychologically different from men and are not prepared to withstand the tortures of war," Carolyn said. "There is also the danger of rape, by both American and enemy soldiers."

Laura said 15 other women were asked to prepare testimonies dealing with other aspects of the issue, such as the physical, sociological and emotional differences between the sexes, as well as the problems of privacy and pregnancy.

Candi Child, a senior in psychology, checks machinery during an ROTC drill. Miss Child says she favors a mandatory military conscription for both men and women.

tion of Utah, believes women should serve alongside men in "combat based on their physical capabilities. There are many of women who are perfectly capable of fighting a war."

Equal responsibility
Ms. Walker said she doesn't believe in a peacetime draft under any circumstances, but "if men must register, women should too."

"I believe in equal rights and equal responsibilities," she said. "I think it's just a matter of time before women will be serving in the military."

She claimed the military doesn't offer equal benefits to women and "if women are to serve in the military, such discrimination would have to stop."

Ms. Walker does not accept theories that women are not as well suited to the military as men.

"I don't think eligibility for the military is determined by sex, but by personality factors," she said. "The theory that women are not emotionally suited for war is just not true. I think that if I had to, I could kill. On the other hand, I know a lot of men who would be affected for the rest of their lives if they were forced to kill."

The presence of women in the armed forces would not corrupt morals or place women in overt danger of rape, Ms. Walker said.

"I don't think the military would be corrupted by the presence of women," she said. "In fact, I think just the opposite would occur. By injecting women, the men would realize that they have to improve their behavior. I think the presence of women would better the men."

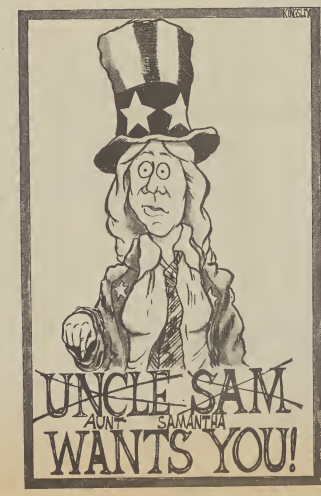

"Sexual torture can be experienced by men and women," she continued. "Men are in danger of castration, whereas women are not. And men can be raped too. Both sexes face the danger of sexual torture by enemy troops."

Ms. Walker also rejected the theory that men need women at home to support them and provide incentive to return.

"I think that's a lot of sentimental hogwash," she said. "A lot of our problems with accepting women are caused by the fact that our society is so role oriented. Women are supposed to patch things up, make everything better. That stereotype doesn't fit all cases. There are many men who do not have women waiting at home for them. What about the soldiers who receive 'Dear John's' Where are their women?"

Ms. Walker sees the movement against women being drafted as a scare tactic.

"I think this whole issue is being used to scare people away from the equal rights amendment," she said. "When it comes to where women do have to serve in the military without the ERA, we're going to see what fools we've been."

Threatens court action

Governor dislikes bomb move

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Pentagon says its 888 Weyete nerve agent bombs may be nearly 12 years old, but they're the best chemical weaponry the country has. That's not good enough for Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, who says he may take Defense Department officials to court to stop them from moving the bombs to Utah.

Matheson contends the bombs, some of which have been found to be leaking in their canisters, are too deadly to move from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Denver to the Tooele Army Depot in Utah's western desert.

The governor says a single drop of the Weyetes' liquid nerve agent GB on the skin would be lethal. Each bomb weighs about 500 pounds and has 346 pounds of agent GB.

The Pentagon has threatened for several years to transfer the bombs out of Denver, where they are stored near — too near, says the Army — the city's Stapleton Airport.

Matheson fought the move in the political arena, meeting frequently with presidential advisers and members of Congress. But he has kept a lawsuit aimed at blocking the transfer dormant in federal court, in case it ever was needed.

A year ago it appeared Matheson had won. The Defense Department said it was abandoning its plans to move the bombs. But then Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., pushed a bill through Congress calling for detoxification of the bombs or their movement out of Denver within a year of its passage, or by Oct. 10, 1981.

The Army had contended all along the bombs would be safest at the remote desert facility near Tooele.

As to Matheson's concern about the bombs leaking, Army Brig. Gen. Niles Fulwiler said the "leakers" were found to be leaking what he termed only low level concentrations, about .0001 milligrams per cubic meter, into the canisters that hold the bombs.

Fulwiler said the earliest the transfer could be made would be

April or May, and "that's probably too optimistic."

The Army would move the bombs from the Rocky Mountain Arsenal to adjacent Stapleton Airport, load them on Air Force C-141 jets, fly them to Dugway Proving Ground in Utah, then move them on the ground the final 46 miles to Tooele Army Depot.

Dr. James Wade, special assistant to the secretary of defense for atomic energy, said the move would entail 14 flights, four or five a week for three weeks.

He said if one of the planes were to crash, it would take a detoxification crew no more than 30 minutes to reach the scene.

Wade said the Defense Science Board, the senior advisory committee to the Department of Defense, reviewed the United States' need for the Weyetes and made a "strong assessment that the Soviet Union in particular has shown very little restraint in the past few years."

Utah's Sens. Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn said they don't mind the Army storing the bombs in Utah as long as it can prove the bombs can be moved safely.

Reagan views fireworks

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan kicked off his four-day inaugural celebration Saturday night by watching a fireworks display flashing over the capital's famous monuments, as the Mormon Tabernacle Choir sang in the background.

"I'm frozen, but at the same time heart warmed by the experience," Reagan said after the half-hour show, watched by several thousand onlookers on a chilly, windy night.

Reagan, Vice President-elect George Bush and their wives sat in front of the choir on seats in front of the floodlit Lincoln Memorial, smiling and apparently enjoying the show as much as the crowd that had gathered in the darkness around the Reflecting Pool.

There were oohs and ahs from the crowd as the choir sang "America the Beautiful," and hundreds of roman candles soared in silence from the base of the pool.

There were cheers when hundreds more fireworks blossomed high in the sky, accompanied by the nearly deafening booms of other exploding charges and a stirring rendition of the "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by the U.S. Army Band.

It was difficult to estimate the size of the crowd because of the darkness and the wide area in which they camped for the display.

"virtually instantaneously" once the agreement is signed.

"We have in place all mechanisms for the necessary implementation of the agreement once it is agreed to by both sides," Watson said. "In other words we have taken extraordinary measures, and precautions and steps over the last several days, particularly since Friday, to insure that, if an agreement was struck, we can execute on that agreement virtually instantaneously."

Previously frozen Iranian assets will be transferred to Tehran only after "our hostages have cleared Iranian airspace," he said.

Carter ends retreat

Carter broke off his weekend retreat to Camp David and returned to Washington Sunday. It was not known whether he would fly overseas to greet the hostages himself. Former Secretary of State Cyrus

R. Vance and a 30-member team, including physicians, psychologists and State Department personnel, was assembling to fly to Wiesbaden, West Germany where the hostages would be taken for several days of examinations and rest at a U.S. Air Force hospital.

Reagan, who will be sworn in as 40th president at noon EST Tuesday at the Capitol, told reporters he would "sign anything" if the hostages were set free. Later, he explained: "I meant that if there was an agreement pending and they had insisted on my signature before they would release the hostages. What I really meant was I would sign that agreement, when they released the hostages."

Reagan also was asked whether he believed the reported settlement maintained the nation's honor. "As far as I understand the terms, if they are what was previously told to us, yes."

Better information promised politicos

Students running for ASBYU offices this year will be better informed about the limits of their power and office before beginning to campaign, said Susan Hollingsworth, elections committee chairman.

"Too often students run for office thinking they can change major university policies," said Miss

Hollingsworth, a senior in communications from Rohnert Park, Calif. "They campaign under platforms of changing ticket distribution policies, lowering tuition, and getting Barry Manilow in concert. We're going to make sure they know early on what their limits of influence are."

Y entomologist warns:

Beetles ravish U.S. forests

By DON CHANDLER
Universe Staff Writer

America's national parks and forests are being attacked by an epidemic of bark beetles which is destroying millions of pine trees and devastating valuable stands of timber, according to a BYU entomologist and world authority on these tiny insects.

Dr. Stephen L. Wood, professor of zoology, said bark beetles kill more of America's trees every year than do forest fires.

"Sixty percent of all natural tree mortality is said to be caused by bark beetles," Wood added. "They pose a serious threat to one of the most critical natural resources of man. An attack of perhaps 5,000 to 50,000 bark beetles is required to kill a single tree, usually in three to five days."

Wood said there are 10,000 different species of bark beetles in the world, each with its own particular kind of tree on which to prey. Some trees, however, will host 30 to 40 different species of bark beetles. Pine trees fall in this category.

Research shows the bark beetles attack trees that are mature, injured or unhealthy.

"If we could go into a forest and find all the broken trees, or unhealthy trees with few branches, or over mature trees and cut them down," Wood said, "we would not have a bark beetle problem."

Bark beetles won't attack healthy trees unless there is a heavy population buildup of the insects in the weak trees, Wood added. "The ideal control method is to keep the forest clean from high-risk trees."

Another preventive measure is to take out the infested trees. Wood said such control is difficult and expensive because in many remote areas there are not enough roads to go in and remove the diseased trees. Leaving dead trees lying on the ground also increases spread of the infestation.

The BYU professor said bark beetle epidemics go in cycles. When all the big trees in that area are gone, the epidemic stops and moves on to another area and does not return until the young trees mature.

According to Wood,

Utah's Huntington Canyon had a serious bark beetle epidemic that started in 1970. In the winter of 1974, however, a bitter cold snap "stopped the epidemic right in its tracks."

During the winter, these bark beetles migrated to the bottom of the host trees, seeking protection from the frost beneath the snow line. In 1974, there was little snow, and the beetles were vulnerable to the cold.

Wood doesn't actually work on the control aspects of bark beetle infestations. Instead, he assists those who do the field work by identifying and classifying the insects. Many types are so obscure only a qualified entomologist can tell them apart. The BYU professor's work is important because it allows those in the field to control the right insects.

Wood has worked for the past 30 years on text that will correctly classify the bark beetles. The volume he has compiled is more than two and a half feet thick. It is awaiting publication.

When the book is made available, it will enable the Forest Service and others working on beetle control to do a more effective job.

Doug Myers, a forester for Uinta National Forest, said several intermountain national forests are experiencing severe bark beetle infestations. Among the worst are the Dixie, Wasatch, Cache and Targhee National Forests.

Millions of dollars have been spent over the last few years in an attempt to stop the epidemic. The U.S. Forest Service has tried logging out the badly diseased trees, but, Myers said, "We can't log fast enough to stop the beetles."

According to Myers, if only one diseased tree is left, it will start the cycle all over again.

Another problem the Forest Service faces is private land mixed with federal domain. If private land owners ignore the bark beetle, government control measures are ineffective.

Dave Holland, an entomologist for the Forest Service, said the bark beetle is the most serious problem facing western forests, but he believes no amount of money will control the infestations.

The forester said the drought of 1975-76 triggered a bark beetle epidemic in Utah. Long periods of dry weather put heavy stress on the trees, decreasing their resistance to attacks and infestations of the insect pests.

Volcano remains quiet

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Clouds again shrouded Mount St. Helens from the view of scientists and curiosity seekers Sunday, though seismograph monitors of the volcano showed no movement.

Poor visibility prevented the U.S. Forest Service spotter plane from making its daily check on the crater, where a 500-foot-tall, charcoal-gray plug of lava has hardened. As a result of the weather, the Forest Service red zone was closed, said spokeswoman Kathy Cashman.

Seismographs monitoring the mountain registered an unflinching pattern of straight lines, said A.B. Adams, spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics center. The recorders are tripped by even slight ground movements, but Sunday was an unusually silent day, he said.

When you think about your future, think beyond the name.

Our name, Target, might not be quite a household word yet, but we're getting there. And getting there is the reason we're aggressively seeking advanced degree graduates in Marketing and Finance. Staffing an energetic retail organization with the "cream of the crop" requires selectivity and sensitivity on our part, and yours. And, if your mind's not made up, and you're still narrowing down the field, consider who we are, and what we do at Target. Target is a rapidly expanding chain of low margin stores born out of the Dayton Hudson Retail Group.

From Minneapolis-St. Paul to Houston and Denver, our billion dollar retailing operation continues to meet the challenge of rapid growth and profitability.

Because of this ability to recognize and react to a constantly changing customer base.

Because it has firmly positioned itself to serve the everyday shopping needs of not only the young family, but consumers of all ages and demographic patterns who today increasingly shop for value as well as quality.

What keeps TARGET on target is its self esteem — expressed in its well organized, efficient operation.

And its attention to value quality. Not 30,000 items. But rather 65,000 items. Not a stress on private-labels. But rather brand names. (Some 70% of TARGET's hard goods are brand names.)

And an approach to management that leaves no surprises. For the customer. Or for management.

No surprise that TARGET has achieved greater sales per square foot than most retailers in the country.

No surprise that TARGET provides all the professional fulfillment and career growth you're thinking about.

Yes, there's quite a story behind the Target name, and more coming. We'd like an opportunity to tell you about it, " firsthand."

Check with your Placement Office for more information about TARGET and ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEW DATES.

Y upset by Miners

By KEVIN STOKER
Asst. Sports Editor

A share of first place in the WAC basketball race sailed over Danny Ainge's head with the Miners their third WAC victory and keep them in contention for the conference title. With the ball out of bounds at UTEP's end of the court and three seconds left, Steve Trumbo threw the ball half the distance to Danny Ainge, who immediately called time out. But Ainge passed to give the Cougars their first loss WAC play. BYU's downfall came when the Cougars were downed 50-47. reg Kite, who had played sparingly the whole game because of foul trouble, garnered his fifth foul. The Cougars then turned the ball over three straight times and the Miners capitalized in three times. UTEP's Roshem Amie then drove the baseline and scored to give the Miners a 57-52 lead. Not known for his shooting, UTEP ripped the shots, hitting 11-13 down the stretch, including even in a row. The Cougars, on the other hand, didn't buy a basket. But BYU stayed close by fouling the right man in the closing minutes. Shooting only 48 percent from the charity stripe, 6-9 Terry

White was fouled twice and missed on both trips. After Amie missed with less than two minutes left, freshman Saarelainen converted a three-point play to pull the Cougars within two. Steve Craig then stole the ball and drove the distance of the floor before passing off to Ainge coming down the lane for the tying basket. It was with the score tied 62-62 that Wayne scored the game winner. BYU coach Frank Arnold said UTEP's surge when the Cougars led 50-47 was the major turning point of the game. "Our lack of offensive play for a five-minute stretch there in the second half proved to be the difference," the Cougar mentor said. He also credited the pressure of the Miners' man-to-man defense for causing the BYU turnovers. Ainge led the BYU attack with 24, followed by Robert's 17 points. Roberts had his trouble from the field but converted on 11-12 free throws. The Cougars jumped out to a 6-0 lead as UTEP, true to form, missed its outside shots over the BYU zone. But the Miners battled back to take the lead with what turned out to be the key to their upset victory. Amie scored after getting the offensive rebound to make the score 10-8 and then Anthony Burns made another basket after an offensive board. UTEP went on to pull down 16 offensive rebounds, many of which resulted in easy baskets.

Outside hitter Dave Richards spikes the ball past two UCLA blockers. In a crowded Smith Fieldhouse Saturday night, the Cougars suffered a loss to the top-ranked Bruins in four sets.

Women cagers gain 2 wins

flu-stricken freshman Karl Rocco came off the bench and shot an amazing 9-9 to contribute 16 points to a 87-83 BYU women's basketball victory over a tough New Mexico team Friday night Albuquerque. Meanwhile, teammate Jackie McBride was dumping in 30 points to take scoring honors. She was the third 30 point effort of the season for 6-0 junior, who is currently ranked 10th in the nation. Just 16 hours later the Cougar women were in Paso scoring a 71-67 victory over a physical University of Texas-El Paso team. The Miners jumped out to a 13-point lead early in the game, forcing the Cougars to play catch up with the free throw until they tied the score 61-61 with a free throw late in the second half. "The girls played hard when they had to," said head coach Courtney Leishman. "It was a great weekend for us." The Cougars are now 10-6 overall and 2-0 in conference play. BYU will be home to face Colorado State on Friday and Wyoming on Saturday. Both contests begin at 5 p.m. in the Marriott Center and will precede the men's games involving the same schools.

Scorecard

WIMMERS DUNKED
By the way the Cougars were 4-0 by UC-Berkeley on Friday. By the way Stanford's must have come as a relief for Coach Tim's winning streak. Though no team points were scored by the Cougars, they did win against some of the top teams in the country. Both the Stanford and UC-Berkeley, as the players held Stanford post. The game was a different story on the court, however, as they were 1-0 for the Bears in either the men's or women's competitions.

WAC PLAY
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Utah and Wyoming emerged victorious from Western Athletic Conference basketball action over the weekend to stay undefeated in first place with 5-0 WAC records. In other WAC weekend play, Texas Tech upset fifth-ranked Brigham Young 64-62 to edge up in the conference standings. While Hawaii routed Air Force 96-36. In non-conference, Utah beat Nevada-Las Vegas edged San Diego State 75-71. Utah pulled out of a 70-70 tie in regulation and beat New Mexico 82-78 in overtime on the sharp shooting of forward Danny Vonnor and center Tom Chambers.

The 6-foot-7 Vonnor, a member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic squad, led Utah with 26 points. Best of them in overtime, Chambers added 25 in the victory which upped the Utes' overall season mark to 15-1. "We needed a victory for our soul," said a disgruntled UWM Coach Gary Collier after the game. "We coached our hearts out and the guys played their hearts out and they're laying out on the floor now." New Mexico dropped to 1-4 in the WAC.

WAC overall. Wyoming had an easier time of it against traditional rival Colorado State, ripping CSU 85-54. Cowboy Mike Jackson and Charles Bradley tallied 12 points apiece in the first half to restrain Wyoming's unbeaten WAC mark. CSU slipped down to 0-5 in the WAC cellar, 2-13 overall. "They went around us. They went over us. They were aggressive," Rams Coach Tony McAdams said. "They made us take more charges than we have all season." And they didn't make too many mistakes. A 20-foot jump shot by UTEP's Julie Wayne with four seconds left broke a 62-62 deadlock to beat senior Brigham Young. BYU kept its third-place WAC berth at 4-1—13-3 overall—but UTEP snuck up to 5-2 in the WAC, 11-5 against all opponents. "It felt good when I shot it," Wayne said of his game-winning jumper. "That win puts us back in the league race." In other action Saturday night, Hawaii's Rodney Jones scored a career-high 17 points to lead the Rainbow Warriors to a half-time Air Force led at intermission 25-20 on the strength of Rick Simmons, who also netched 17 points. But the Falcons—who have yet to win a WAC opponent—slipped behind in the second half and the Bruins forged ahead to a 56-30 win.

Brewitt increased its WAC mark to 3-3 to move into a fourth-place tie with San Diego. The Falcons are currently in sixth place behind New Mexico with an 0-4 WAC record. The San Diego Aztecs lost a non-league game, 78-77, to Nevada-Las Vegas Saturday and fell to 0-5 overall.

MOBILE BOWL
MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — David Overstreet of Oklahoma and Cliff Chatham of Central Oklahoma State each scored touchdowns and Steve Stuck's Herb Menhardt kicked three field goals as the North overpowered the South 50-18 Saturday in the 32nd Senior Bowl All-Star game.

Error corrected

In its Friday, Jan. 16 issue, The Daily Universe erroneously stated a hearing concerning a conditional use permit of KABE-FM radio station had been set for Feb. 6, at 7 p.m. The correct date and time of the meeting is Wednesday, Feb. 11, at 6 p.m., at the same place as mentioned earlier. The article's headline was also in error when it stated the station's conflict was between the Federal Communications Commission and KABE-FM. The conflict is actually between the station and a local citizens' group.

Two officers to discuss Soviet military threat

Two officers from the Foreign Technological Division, Wright Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, will visit BYU Tuesday for a one-hour public briefing about the Soviet technological and military challenge. Capt. Charles Woodard and Lt. Wiley Hill, representatives from the Soviet Awareness Team, will speak in the Varsity Theater at 12:10 p.m. 321 ELWC will hold audience overflow. The briefing will be a multimedia presentation, including slides and movies on the Soviet military threat. According to Capt. Ralph Hughes, assistant professor of aerospace studies, the officers will present "the latest information the U.S. has on Soviet technology and their war-making potential." Capt. Charles Bateman, assistant professor of BYU aerospace studies, said the briefing will be an excellent opportunity for the community to learn about the existing Soviet threat. "Most people think the U.S. can co-exist with the Soviets," he said, "but it will shock you to find out about what they are doing."

U.S. Attorney investigating employee fired for 'news leak'

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The U.S. Attorney's office is looking into allegations that a former employee at the Defense Depot in Ogden was fired for providing information to an Ogden newspaper and the FBI about an alleged pyramid operation at the depot.

Lonnie Ford said he believes he was fired because he wouldn't join a pyramid scheme. Ford went to reporters at the Ogden Standard-Examiner to talk about the scheme he claimed was going on at the plant.

An FBI agent interviewed Ford at the depot last week. When Ford returned to work Friday, he was given notice of termination.

U.S. Attorney Ron

Rencher, Salt Lake City, said the allegations would be investigated by his office. DDO public relations officer Don Swan said Ford was involved in an altercation at the plant with another employee which caused disciplinary problems.
